There are three types of Passenger or Travel lists a person may generate when they leave one country for another. Those traveling by water and air provided information at the place of departure as well as the place of arrival. For land entry, they may have left a record at the place of departure, but in many cases they did not. They did have to provide documentation or information at the place of arrival. The individual's passport(s) may provide information to help you locate the passenger lists.
